

ONE MAN KILLED THREE INJURED

At Hayden Friday Afternoon.—Were Working on New Modern Woodmen Building.

HEAVY TIMBER DISLODGED

Thomas Van Meter Fell Twenty Feet, Receiving Injuries Resulting In His Death.

Four men were injured, one of them fatally, Friday afternoon by the dislodgement and falling of some heavy timbers on the new Modern Woodmen building at Hayden.

Thomas Van Meter was the man to meet death in the accident, while Seward Downs, William Stigdon and Walter Goodhue were less seriously injured. Down's left leg was broken below the knee, one of the timbers striking it in falling. Goodhue and Stigdon were considerably bruised but were not badly hurt. The accident occurred about three o'clock. A heavy truss was being placed in position, and the dislodgement of an upright support by the failure of a jack to work properly, allowed several of the heavy timbers to fall to the second floor. Van Meter and Goodhue were on the truss when it fell and were carried down with it. The former struck on his head on a second floor joist and was rendered unconscious.

He was carried to the residence of Alex Cain near the building and a physician of Hayden was summoned. Later physicians from North-Vernon and Seipio were called but they were unable to save the injured man's life. He did not regain consciousness and died about 11 o'clock that night.

His body was taken to his home two miles southeast of Helt's Mill this morning.

The funeral services will be held Sunday Morning at the Christian church at Reddington, the funeral cortege leaving the house for the church about 10 o'clock.

The deceased was about 60 years old and was well known. He moved to North Vernon several years ago but returned to the farm a year ago. He leaves a wife and four children, Walter and Martin Van Meter and Mrs. Will Stigdon and Mrs. Orlando Branaman. The children all live in the neighborhood in which their father resided.

The result of the accident Friday caused deep sorrow at Hayden and was keenly felt by the Woodmen especially. This was the second serious happening in which the new Modern Woodmen building has figured. A few weeks ago as the house was nearing completion it was blown down during a heavy wind storm which passed over that section. The lodge sustained a loss of about $800 by the wrecking of the building but soon began arrangements for rebuilding.

ECONOMICAL.

That Much Can Be Said For Latest Thing in Drinks.

Shelby county can always be counted upon to know the latest thing in drinks. From an exchange it is learned that Shelby is now taking pride in a very economical form of intoxication. It says:

"It has remained for a Shelby county farmer to discover an entirely new 'jag' producer. According to a statement of a man making the discovery, the person who takes aboard a package of this new stimulant, wants to be joyful, climb trees and play tricks. When one partakes there is no danger of getting hold of the bottle with fights in it.

"For some time a well known farmer, recognized as one of the leading 'dry's' of the state, had noticed that a number of the hands on his place appeared unusually hilarious. He was quite sure that none of the popular beverages of the day were being consumed by them and he began an investigation. He went out where his men were engaged in removing green feed from a silo.

"After working about this for a time and breathing the fumes from it he discovered that he wanted to dance, play tag with his men and go through all of those unusual capers characteristic of those who take on board too much of the principal product of Kentucky. Realizing that the entire force of men were quite as intoxicated as himself, he stopped work for a time and all were soon in their normal condition. A second attempt to take the contents from the silo brought on another jagged condition of the entire crowd, thus convincing the farmer that as a modern and cheap boozatorium a silo is the latest thing out."

POLICE CHIEF SAYS

That Saloon Men Will Be Held To Strict Observance of Laws.

Marshal Abell states that the new saloons must obey the laws. They must close promptly at 11 p. m. and on Sundays and holidays they will be watched closely to see that there is no back door patronage. No cards or dice throwing will be allowed in any of the places and any liquor dealer who allows minors in his saloon will be severely dealt with. A strict enforcement of the regulation against women visiting saloons is planned and any women found loafing around the side or back entrances will be taken in charge. The chief of police says that he expects to keep a strict watch during the day time for violations and will also see that the regulations at night are observed.

It is thought the majority of the saloon men will be careful in the conduct of their places as they will not care to lose their licenses which are more valuable now than formerly.

COUNCILMAN WAS ELECTED

Vacancy Caused by Resignation of J. S. Mills, Was Filled Friday Night.

WILLIAM BUSE WAS SELECTED

Is a Democrat But Election Was Accomplished by the Support of Three Republicans.

Contrary to the expectations of the public, a councilman, to fill the vacancy caused by the recent resignation of J. S. Mills, was elected at the special meeting of the council held Friday evening.

William Buse, a Democrat, was named, his election being accomplished by the support of the three Republican members of the council added to the vote of Councilman Tasker, the Democrat who had from the start, been his backer.

It was known that the Democratic members had not been able to unite on a candidate and it being the general opinion that the Republicans would continue to scatter their votes until an opportunity was presented to select a member of their party, the belief Friday was that the meeting would result in a dead lock as was the case at Thursday night's session.

Immediately after the meeting had been called to order Friday evening by Mayor Swope, Councilman W. R. Day announced that he would withdraw the name of Robert Irwin and would place John Goodale in nomination. This announcement caused a stir among those present and several of the Democratic leaders showed considerable agitation. They were afraid that it meant that Tasker had joined the Republicans to select an old soldier.

As Day took his seat after making the nomination, Councilman Misch arose and made a new nomination, presenting the name of Charles Vogel. He and Councilman Davison had agreed during the day to transfer their support to him from Moritz, it being understood that Vogel was the second choice of Tasker, if the latter had any such thing as second choice concealed about his person.

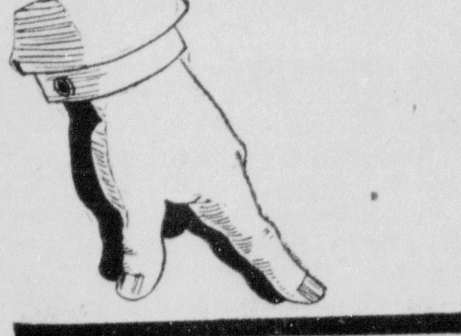

On the first and second ballots Goodale and Vogel each received two votes and Buse and Everback one each.

On the third ballot some one let loose of one more vote than was considered good form. Vogel received 2. Goodale 1. Everback 1. and Buse 3. a total of 7, or just one more than the number of councilmen.

On the fourth ballot the suspense was ended, the three Republicans throwing their votes to Tasker's candidate, William Buse, and electing him.

As soon as the result was announced, the council adjourned. The new councilman lives in the south part of the city, having moved to Seymour from his farm south of town something over a year ago. He has been rather active in Democratic politics, having at one time served six years as county commissioner and having been elected a member of the county council last year.

the question as to whether his election as councilman would be valid. Some have contended that on account of the law against holding two offices of trust and profit at the same time, he could not be elected councilman while holding the county office. However he sent to the auditor this morning his resignation as a member of the county council, taking this action before qualifying for his new office. It is believed that this will remove the danger of his not being entitled to a seat among the city solomons.

Davison and Misch had been firm in their opposition to Buse. The new councilman and Councilman Davison are credited with having had some differences in the past and Mr. Davison is reported to have said that he would under no circumstances vote for Buse, even if it meant the election of a Republican.

It is a rather general conviction of those familiar with the situation that Davison's leadership in the council has been shattered or at least has received a bad jolt by the new combination and Buse's election to membership in the council. Some more exciting times in that body are anticipated now. Future appointments will also be watched with interest.

The new councilman is understood to be strongly opposed to the South Walnut street improvement.

DEAL CLOSED

For Sale of Business of the Whitmer Medicine Company.

W. P. Masters today closed a deal for the disposal of the business of the Whitmer Medicine Co. of this city. The new owners are Arthur and Oscar Hutton, North Vernon liverymen. They are now in possession of the business and there is a probability that they will later move it to North Vernon.

The consideration in the deal was $22,000 and Mr. Masters received property of that value in northern Indiana. He was the owner of all the stock. He bought the business Sept. 1, 1908. Later he sold part of the stock to Ed Rinne and W. L. Johnson but recently again acquired all of the stock. The venture was a profitable one for him but for various reasons he desired to retire.

The business was originally established at Salem by the late Dr. H. C. Whitmer. Later he moved it to Seymour and developed it until it became a big money maker. After his death the business was continued under the management of Mrs. Whitmer until the sale to Mr. Masters.

At the present time there are eleven wagons on the road and the sales amount to a large amount each month.

A. L. Thester, superintendent of the Alexandria schools, will serve as starter, and Carl McGannon of Thorntown, will be the first judge of the finish in the track events. These three persons will serve in the capacity of judges at the oratorical and reading contest, to be held at the Philbarg theatre at night.

The second and third judges of the finish in track work, are W. O. Wisler, of Madison, and Supt. J. A. Linke of Seymour. The judges in the field events will be V. V. Allen, of North Vernon, Prof. Roubush of Lawrenceburg, and Supt. Paul Van Riper of Franklin.

The time-keepers will be H. E. Driver, of Aurora, J. C. Edwards of Seymour, and Wilbur Brewer of Franklin. P. S. Giltner of North Vernon, will act as clerk of the course. Prof. Roache of Franklin, will serve as the official announcer.

Sunday Closing Notice.

Patrons of the Seymour post office should remember the announcements made from time to time in this paper that, beginning with tomorrow, the Seymour post office will be closed on Sundays. The Seymour office is the last one in this section of Indiana to close on Sundays but the people seem very well satisfied with the arrangement for they believe that post office employees, like men in other pursuits, should have one day's rest in seven. The post office lobby will be open Sunday mornings from 7 o'clock until 10 o'clock so that those patrons who have lock boxes can open them as usual. Hotel proprietors should educate their guests to have their mail sent in care of the hotel so that it will be deposited in the hotel lock box. Special delivery letters will be delivered by messenger as usual.

Ohio Graft Probe Not to Stop

MANY ARE ON THE ANXIOUS SEAT

If the Prosecutor's Plans Work Out, Rich Ohioans and Officers of Corporations Who Maintained Lobbyists at Columbus May Expect to Be Indicted Together With Solons Whose Palms Were Ever Outstretched.

Columbus, O., May 6.—If expectations at the Franklin county courthouse are realized rich Ohioans and officers of corporations who have sent experienced lobbyists here to deal with legislators who had their hands out most of the time, may expect to be indicted. Intimation to this effect has been made by Prosecutor Turner to offset reports that only solons would be embraced in the report of the grand jury. Turner plans to get everyone possible connected with bribery, at both the giving and receiving end. The five legislators and the sergeant-at-arms, indicted Wednesday, when arraigned all entered pleas of not guilty. It is understood that these legislators and others expecting indictments have raised a large fund for legal expense.

Several law firms have been retained. It is likely that these attorneys will co-operate. There is no doubt that some of the witnesses summoned before the grand jury, who thought the prosecution was in possession only of facts concerning a few cases, in which detectives laid traps to catch legislators, did some tall fibbing before the grand jury, and Prosecutor Turner says there are likely to be indictments for perjury on that account. Before the grand jury gets through, witnesses from all sections of the state, identified both directly and indirectly with lobbying, will be summoned.

TOO MANY WIVES

This Man Is Charged With Having Five in as Many Towns.

Atlantic City, N. J., May 6.—Five wives are expected to appear against Hobart Partridge, now in prison at Philadelphia, awaiting extradition to this county, when he is put on trial to answer a desertion charge. A detective who has been investigating Partridge's career at the instance of Mrs. Josephine VanSant Partridge, daughter of a wealthy shipbuilder of Port Republic, has just discovered another "Mrs. Hobart Partridge," who was Miss Helen Bruner of Phoenixville, Pa., whom he says identifies a picture of Partridge as being that of her husband. According to this wife, Partridge disappeared shortly after their marriage early in April.

A woman who lives in Bridgeport, Conn., one in Schenectady, and another in Harrisburg, are said to claim Partridge as a husband. All the alleged weddings are said to have taken place since October, 1910, when he married Miss VanSant.

He Was Too Wise For Them.

New York, May 6.—The wire-tapping game was tried on Charles McDonald, a Philadelphia contractor, who refused to be let in on an easy thing. He did some volunteer detective work and succeeded, with the help of eight detectives, in getting thirteen fake poolroom men to police station, where they were locked up. Many of their faces were already in the rogues' gallery.

ALASKA'S GOVERNOR RECEIVES ORDERS

Instructed to Prevent Further Coal Rioting.

Washington, May 6.—Attorney General Wickersham and Secretary of the Interior Fisher conferred in regard to the rioting which occurred at Cordova, Alaska, when coal from docks or vessels of the Alaska Steamship company was thrown overboard as a protest against the government ignoring demands by people of Alaska that the coal lands of the territory be opened up. As a result of the conference Attorney General Wickersham sent telegrams to United States marshals in Alaska, instructing them to report the present condition of affairs and to take all necessary steps to protect shipping at Cordova. In addition to this, Secretary Fisher sent a telegram to Governor W. E. Clark of Alaska, who is at present at Chaplin, Conn., instructing him to take action to suppress lawlessness.

"You are fully advised of my personal desire and determination to promote Alaskan coal development as promptly as effective protection of public interest will permit. Nevertheless lawlessness must be absolutely suppressed and punished, and you will take prompt and vigorous action to this end," says the secretary's telegram to the governor.

Tennessee and Kentucky Companies
Join in Giant Corporation.

Chattanooga, Tenn., May 6.—Many coal properties are included in a $6,000,000 coal merger brought about here. The name of the new concern is the Continental Coal corporation. The project is financed by Chattanooga and Louisville men. The main offices will be in Chattanooga, with a branch in Louisville; and mine offices at Wallsend, Ky.

The consolidation takes in properties centered around Pineville, Ky., comprising 30,000 acres of coal lands, in which, it is estimated, there are 300,000,000 tons of coal. Besides the opened mines now in operation, and the usual mine shipments, there are eleven miles of railroad which the corporation takes over.

Do Your Cooking in the Cool

A hot kitchen is little better than a prison in summer. But the range is there, so all the cooking and the washing must be done there, too.

What a relief it would be to move the range where you pleased. You can do this with a New Perfection Oil Cook-stove—cook your dinner out on the porch, if you like. It is the only range that is really portable—that works equally well in any place. There are no connections to be made, as in a gas range; no wiring, as with an electric stove; no sooty flues and ash-filled grates, as with coal or wood.

The long, enameled chimneys carry the heat directly up to saucepans, oven or boiler; you get full value from your fuel, without waste.

GRAVE CONCERN AT WASHINGTON

Mexican Situation Is Growing
More Serious.

PRESIDENT DIAZ POWERLESS

The Apparent Breaking Down of the Mexican Government as Evidenced by Its Inability to Suppress the Revolt Revives the Fear at Washington That This Government May Yet
Have to Intervene.

Washington, May 6.—Of the fact that the Mexican situation is causing United States officials grave concern,
there is no longer any concealment.
Developments continue to indicate that the Diaz government is powerless to check the revolt, and fear is being expressed now of its ability to protect American and other foreign interests.
More than three-quarters of the country is in revolt and the general conditions are more serious than at any time since Francisco I. Madero, the insurrecto leader, raised his standard
several months ago against the government in the northern section of the country.

The situation near Acapulco is described in official dispatches to the state department as "most disquieting and intolerable." Two Americans have been murdered by rebel bandits near that place.

The seriousness with which this government regards the situation is indicated by the fact that the state department has made public not only official messages describing the situation at Acapulco as intolerable, but several other messages from United States consuls and other diplomatic officers outlining the conditions in other parts of the country. Nearly all these messages indicated an alarming spread of the revolution.

While the situation in the republic
to the south is causing much anxiety to President Taft and other officials of the government, they are still hopeful, and intend to maintain their present policy of non-interference unless driven to an extremity. In the latter event Mr. Taft will not act until he lays the matter before congress in a special message. If conditions in Mexico continue to grow worse it will only be a question of time when other governments will put the matter of protecting their interests up to this country.

The Mexican situation was discussed at Friday's cabinet meeting, but President Taft and his advisers adjourning firmly determined to do everything possible to avoid intervention on the part of the United States.

GOING RIGHT AHEAD

Peace Conference Continued Under
Extension of Armistice.

El Paso, Tex., May 6.—Owing to poor telegraphic communication with Mexico City, the armistice was extended today. Only one wire is working to the capital, and that is intermittent and piled up with business.

It is said that Venustiano Carranza, provisional governor of Coahuila, has received a cablegram from General Bernardo Reyes quieting some of the fears of the insurrectos about the trouble he might create on his return.
He cabled Carranza that he was friendly to the insurrectos and asking Carranza to aid him in any work he might undertake on his return.

Rebels Closing in on Torreon.

Monterey, Mexico, May 6.—Advises received from towns in the Nazas river valley, in the vicinity of Torre-on, say that that whole region, with the exception of that city, is controlled by rebel bands and that the federal forces are utterly incapable of coping with the situation. Several American families reside on the outskirts of Lerdo, and they had a harrowing experience during the attack on that town by rebels. It is said the evacuation of Torreon by the federals is now being arranged.

Insurrectos Revise History.

El Paso, Tex., May 6.—The usual celebration of Cinco De Mayo, the anniversary of the battle of Puebla,
of which President Diaz was the hero,
was not held in Juarez. In the insur-recto camp there was much celebrating and many speeches, but Juarez did not celebrate. The insurrectos ex-toll Zaragoza as the hero of Puebla
and Diaz was left out.

PAYING YOUR FARE.

Text, "So he paid the fare thereof."—
Jonah 1, 3.

The book of Jonah is unique. It's the most admirable short story in the world. Literary correspondence schools should note it. It is begun and finished in forty-eight verses. Wealth of incident, progression of movement, variety of detail, dialogue and narrative, are wonderfully balanced. Its condensation is a model. Only ten verses in the second chapter of this fascinating book, yet they form a paragon of worship, prayer and praise. Nevertheless no Bible book has received half the cannonading that Jonah has. The world has had much to say by way of pleasantry concerning Jonah and the whale. It's been the laughingstock of infidel and the victim of higher critic.
With caricature and ridicule, with ignorance and learning, they've attacked
it. They've gloated wildly over the size of the whale's throat. Shrieks of merriment have accompanied their measurement of the whale's intestines.
The Bible says the Lord "prepared" a great fish. If he prepared the fish I would suppose he made the dimensions to suit the case. However, the world wags on. No less a scholar than the former president of the greatest university of the west questions the story,
and no less a person than Christ himself thought it worthy to quote as being correct. I prefer to range myself with the latter. But the story of that far off day doesn't have to be true. It's happening in your town today.

The Runaway Sailor.

Indeed, Jonah is a type of many people in many ages. There may be some in your town, in your house, possibly one in your shoes. I've had some on the passenger list of my church. If they'd only jump overboard! But, no;
they think the captain and the crew and all the other passengers ought to be thrown overboard. They want to stay and steer the ship. Oh, they've good stuff in them, I'm sure, but they raise storms and nearly sink the vessel. You see, the man who's running away from God—that's what Jonah was foolishly trying to do—always is an unhappy fellow. Did you ever try to hide yourself from God by excuses
or company or lies or loud laughter?
God said to Jonah, "Go to Nineveh!"
that was eastward by land. Jonah started to Tarshish, westward, by water. With his bundle on his back he slips away from his little home town in Galilee. Two days later he's skulking through the narrow streets and busy wharfs of the seaport town of Joppa. To those heathen sailors he's a queer looking fish in strange waters.
But he has found an easy way out of a hard task—he has eluded God, poor Jonah! He has not yet learned the universe, in the world that now is or that which is to come, for a man running away from God. Duty's never done by dodging it.

Jonah steps aboard the rough craft,
pays his fare, gangplank is hauled in,
anchor is weighed, sails are hoisted.
Soon the rigging is rattling in the strong breeze of the Mediterranean.
Jonah smiles craftily; has the air of a man who's secretly done a smart thing.
He has overreached God! Ever feel that way, neighbor? Soon he's in the hold asleep. Hark! Was that laughter? No; 'twas the mutter of thunder and flash of lightning. Snap goes rigging, crash goes the mast. The vessel's pitching "a-beam's end." The superstitious sailors are hunting the cause. They cast lots. Jonah's the man. He confesses. They bring him to the side of the ship, lift him over the guard rail and drop him into the angry waters below. He paid his fare to Tarshish, but he never got there.
Neither does any one who runs away from God and duty. It was an expensive trip for Jonah. He lost money, time, approval of conscience and smile
of God—would have lost life and soul
but for God's mercy. Sin in the soul is like Jonah in the ship—the smooth-water is turned into a tempestuous sea.

"The Devil's Dice Are Loaded."

Satan robs you, doesn't deliver the goods and doesn't refund. He takes your money and puts you off at a poor landing place. He promises to take you from Joppa to Tarshish and throws you over before you are halfway. Only one thing is certain—he never fails to collect the fare. Dealing with the devil is like playing with a gambler at his own game—when you are surest he has you. My scolding friend bought a stack of infidel books. How he used to sneer! He paid $10 for his ticket to Tarshish when he bought the books.
He landed in perdition. You pay your price. The beautiful Chicago helmsman married the young lord with handsome face and rotten character. Have you read her heartbroken letters? She's paying the price. That woman who got the extra pair of silk hose-ry through the clerk's mistake bragged of being in a pair of stockings, but she's out a woman's finer and nobler instincts. That man who dodged the trolley fare thought he got a free ride, but he didn't. He paid the coin of meanness and dishonesty. He was poorer when he left the car than when he entered. You must pay the fare.
You're paying either to Tarshish or Nineveh, the devil or God—which?

The Trend Towards Osteopathy.

(Editorial Cincinnati Enquirer.)

"The whole tendency of medical thought and experience now is in the direction of abandoning the extensive use of drugs. Just as the teaching of a moral liberal religion has softened, if not destroyed, the old orthodox dogmas of original sin, fore-ordination and eternal hell, the growth of homeopathy has immen-sely modified the old orthodox allopathic system of bleeding and drastic administration of drugs.

Both these influences have been sturdily resisted by the standpatters in religion and medicine, but both have largely succeeded. Insurgency is the order of the day everywhere.
Another more recent influence which has helped to reduce drug-giving has been the coming of osteopathy, which has found its way to reluctant recognition.

"It has unquestionably demonstrated that many ills for which drugs
were being given grew out of osseous (bony) displacements or maladjustments, and needed only skillful manipulation."

"Now it is perceived that Nature intended that everyone should be healthy, and that the only causes of disease are either a mechanical injury or poison or impurities taken in to the system or waste remaining there and clogging it. Disease, according to the latest school of thought, is simply the effort of Nature to remove poison and obstructions and should not be suppressed or aborted, but Nature should be aided to sustain the system until the work is completed."

"Thousands have arisen to testify that osteopathy restored them to health. Almost daily additional triumphs over so-called incurables are being recorded, evidencing that the osteopaths are finding the keys and opening the seals and coming into possession of the glorious heritage to mankind—health, through Nature's methods."

"Here is seen osteopathy, backed by multitudes of witnesses from all walks of life, who attest to its potency and clamor for its treatment.
It is contributing to human happiness and comfort by displacing disease
with health."

The grocery firm of Mathena &
Briner at Crothersville has been dissolved, Ed Mathena retiring. He has not decided what business he will engage in.

HOT ARGUMENTS

Of Attorneys in Derringer Case.
Jones Had His Say.

When it came time for the argument in the case of Richard Derringer of Crothersville vs. the I. & L. Traction Co., which was tried at Columbus, the attorneys indulged in some real vicious talk. Attorney Frank Jones of this city, had his say. The Herald says of the trial and argument:

The jury in the case of Richard Derringer vs. the Indianapolis & Louisville Traction Company, after several hours deliberation, following a most acrimonious debate between the attorneys, entered Judge Wickens' circuit court Thursday night with a verdict of $300 for the plaintiff. It is understood that the traction company will appeal.

In summing up the case for the plaintiff, former Judge Hacker, of Hacker & Jones, assailing the testimony of certain witnesses, took occasion to remark that it was commonly known that employees of railroad companies dare not decline to testify for their employers else they would lose their positions. This rankled in the mind of Attorney Charles Baker, of Baker & Richman, who appeared for the defendant company and when he got the floor he "came back" with interest. "Evil to him who evil thinks," said he, caustically as he glared at Judge Hacker. "Never in my experience as an attorney have I known a jackleg to resort to such tactics."

The oratory of Mr. Baker got into the "erop" of Attorney Jones. He had his innings a little later and he took a whack at Mr. Baker, remarking that when an attorney had nothing to say for his client, it was ever the case that he would abuse the attorney on the opposing side.

Care With Mushrooms.

It is not generally known that mushrooms on account of the amount of nitrogen they contain approach nearer to animal food than many other vegetable products. An analysis made by Professor Attwood shows that mushrooms contain 3.5 per cent proteids, boiled potatoes 2.5 and onions 1.6. Experts say that mushrooms should be eaten perfectly fresh and never eaten after repeating or being "warmed over." One of the extensive mushroom farmers in England says that persons subject to rheumatic and gouty attacks should abstain from mushrooms and that liquor should not be drunk at a meal where mushrooms are served.—New York World.

TROOPS GATHERED NEAR THE SPOT MADE MEMORABLE BY TRAGIC DEEDS

Battle of the Alamo Is Recalled by the Present Movement

Americans In Texas Re-
belled Against Mexico
In 1835

THE thousands of United States troops now in Texas are encamped near the historic spot where the battle of the Alamo was fought. There a small force of American pioneers of the southwest fought against overwhelming odds until death gave the Mexican army a temporary victory.

Thermopylae had its message of defeat. Alamo had none.

This inscription, ascribed to Lord Macaulay, is engraved on a monument in the grounds of the Texas capitol at Austin in commemoration of the garrison, all of which died fighting against overwhelming odds in the battle of the Alamo, which ended March 6, 1836.

Americans in Texas rose in rebellion against the government of Mexico in 1835. Early in 1836 the rebellion grew into warfare, says the Kansas City Star. The Texans were under the leadership of the bluff General Sam Houston as president of the new republic of Texas and as commander in chief of their little army of volunteers. It was a daring undertaking for a scant 2,000 men to attempt to wrest the state from Mexico, with its 15,000 drilled troops. But the Texans, headed by Sam Houston, Davy Crockett, William Travis and John Haydon, feared no failure. The Mexican General Santa Anna set out from the Rio Grande northward to quickly conquer and punish rebellious Texans. His army of 6,000 men after a march of nearly 600 miles across a desolate country reached San Antonio confident of capturing that town and moving on to the new capitol at Washington, Tex.

San Antonio Was Unprepared.

The garrison at San Antonio was unprepared for Santa Anna's coming. The first tidings of his approach were given by the sentinels posted on the roof of the Alamo, which was an abandoned Franciscan mission built in 1723. It numbered about 185 men under command of Colonel William Travis. When the news of Santa Anna's approach reached Travis he determined to make good its defense until reinforcements could arrive. With him was Colonel James Bowie, whose name was always associated with his famous knife, and Davy Crockett, the frontiersman and hunter of history and romance. They had a few pieces of artillery, little ammunition, ninety bushels of corn and thirty beef cattle, which were hurried within the inclosure.

Santa Anna demanded immediate surrender. Travis returned a defiant refusal, emphasized by a cannon shot. A blood red flag, signifying no quarter, immediately was raised above the Mexican camp, and their batteries opened upon the garrison. Meanwhile Travis had dispatched messengers to Houston and Washington, Tex., ninety-five miles away, appealing for assistance. The Mexican batteries attempted a breach in the stone walls of the mission at dawn, Feb. 26. For hours every day the Mexicans continued the siege. In a hot fire which was opened upon the garrison on the last morning in February some of the bombs fell close to the spot where Davy Crockett lay. He sprang up and made his way to the ramparts just as the Mexican gunner was reloading and before he could fire again shot him. A comrade caught up the match and ran to the touchhole. But already a fresh rifle had been banded the Tennessean, and he picked off the second gunner as he had the first. Three more Mexicans made the attempt and met a like fate, and for a time the gun was silenced.

Brave Colonel Travis.

Colonel Travis called the garrison about him March 3. He made a brief talk, telling his comrades that longer hope for assistance was useless. He said that the Alamo should be surrendered or it should be defended until

CHANGED HOSE AND MIND.

Hole Discovered in Stocking Cost Man His Bride.

Leonora Murphy, nineteen and pretty, and Clyde Rowan of Astoria, Ore., after having been engaged for four years were on their way to the minister's to get married when the bride to be discovered a hole in her right stocking just above the shoe top. By the time the two reached the parsonage she had decided that the hole would show when she knelt before the minister.

In spite of Rowan's protest she bade the minister and Rowan wait until she could go home and change her stockings. She hadn't been home more than five minutes before she telephoned Rowan that he need not wait any longer. She said that while changing her stockings she had also changed her mind and had determined not to marry.

CORONATION POMP

London Americans to Outshine
Royalty.

HOSTESS TO SPEND A MILLION

Few of Them to See the Queen Crowned, With the Six Prettiest Girls in England to Carry Her Eighteen Yard Velvet Train.

Dear Elsa—In London they talk and think of nothing but the coronation. So says Ethel, from whom I have just received a letter full of coronation gossip. It is said Queen Mary is going to be a great deal more exclusive than her predecessors, and therefore to get any sort of court recognition will count more than it did when good natured King Edward and Queen Alexandra were the heads of society.

American hostesses in London are bound to do their best to outshine the women of the old British aristocracy, who are now inclined to crow over their Yankee equals, since it looks as if quarterings would count more than dollars at the new court. As the old families are, as a rule, less well endowed with money than with ancestors, the struggle for social supremacy cannot fail to prove interesting. The king and queen themselves seem inclined to stand aside and let the two factions fight it out, although, so far as favors go, the names of American peeresses are notably absent from coronation appointments.

Still, there isn't much doubt that, whatever are their sympathies, King George and Queen Mary are too polite to risk offending the shopkeepers and their sort by driving rich Americans away from London. London merchants have thrived and grown fat on the extravagances of the climbers, and many a poverty stricken noble is enabled to make a respectable appearance at the coronation only because some rich American is paying him extortionate rent for his moldy town house or the bleak, inaccessible castle that hasn't had a decent overhauling since the time of William the Conqueror.

It's a grand charity which these Americans are keeping up in thus financing poverty stricken peers, and doubtless Queen Mary, who has a keen eye to all charities, will see that the generous Americans are not pressed too hard. The sentiments of the Princess of Wales seem to have been somewhat modified by the queen, for it was recently unofficially announced that, in spite of persistent rumors, Queen Mary was never really antagonistic to Americans, her disapproval being limited to a class known as climbers, who are equally distasteful to their own country people.

Sustained and cheered by this news, many American women in London are preparing to spend large sums of money to win royal favor by entertaining during the coronation season. It is said Mrs. Baldwin Drummond, the wealthy Chicago society leader, whose millions came from her late husband, Marshall Fields, Jr., is one of those who will entertain most splendidly. It is whispered that she will not hesitate to spend a million in coronation entertainments. A special service of gold plate is being made for one of her dinners, which it is rumored will cost at least $150,000. Mrs. Drummond's Scottish country place is not far from that formerly occupied by the present king and queen. They were once quite neighborly with the rich young widow from Chicago, her children, the young Fields, having been playmates of the royal children. There has been no particular exchange of amenities lately. Not only the late King Edward, but his daughter-in-law, seemed to resent the fact that the Chicago widow passed over a royal suitor, Prince Francis of Teck, to choose a simple English gentleman for her second husband.

The fact that Mr. Drummond was even poorer than Prince Francis did not add to the serenity of a match-making sister, and for a time Mrs. Drummond enjoyed little favor either at the hands of King Edward, who had done all he could to provide for the Tecks, or those of his daughter-in-law. The death of Prince Francis may have served to heal this wound. That Mrs. Drummond is willing to spend so much on the coronation gayety looks as if she believed that Queen Mary would again smile on the woman who had rejected her brother.

The Duchess of Roxburghe, who was Miss May Goeliet of New York; the Countess of Granard, who was Miss Beatrice Mills; Lady Arthur Paget, Mrs. Ava Astor; Mrs. M. B. Leeds, the widow of the tin plate magnate; over whose social fortunes Lady Paget is presiding; the Countess of Ancaster, who was Miss Eloise Breeze; the Duchess of Manchester, formerly Miss Zimmerman of Cincinnati; the Countess of Donoughmore, who was Miss Grace of New York, and Mrs. Beatty, Mrs. Drummond's sister-in-law, are a few of the Anglo-American ladies who are expected to entertain largely.

Just at present the most envied young women in Great Britain are the six who have been appointed as train bearers to the queen in place of the usual pages. The prettiest girls in the English aristocracy were selected for this honor. There isn't a drop of American blood in their veins, and most of them have been chosen from families connected with the court. Quite the most charming is Lady Eileen Knox, daughter of the Earl and Countess Ranfurly and the granddaughter of the aged Viscount Charlemont. Queen Mary first made Lady Eileen's acquaintance when their majesties made their tour of the colonies, Lord Ranfurly then being governor general of New Zealand. She was presented at court late in 1909, and, although the social season has since then been almost a blank, Lady Eileen's bewitching Irish beauty had already won her fame.

It is really odd, but only one of the train bearers is an English girl, and this is Lady Victoria Carrington, whose four sisters have all been society beauties. She is the daughter of the Earl and Countess of Carrington. Lady Eileen Butler, daughter of the Earl and Countess of Lanesborough, is accustomed to the presence of royalty, her father being assistant military secretary to the Duke of Connaught. Lady Mary Dawson is the only unmarried daughter of the Earl and Countess of Dartrey and, like Lady Eileen Butler, is a very up to date young woman, excelling in all sorts of outdoor sports.

Lady Dorothy Browne, daughter of the Count and Countess Kenmare, is noted for her wonderful sapphire blue eyes. Scotland is represented among the beauties by the Lady Mabel Ogilvy, daughter of the Earl and Countess of Airlie. The countess, who is now a widow, holds an appointment in the queen's household. Lady Mabel is nineteen years old and is by no means the least good looking of the train bearers. The queen has let it be known that they are to wear simple white satin gowns, with the conventional ostrich feathers in their hair. The train which they are to carry promises to be so heavy an affair that possibly two more bearers may have to be appointed at the last minute. It is of red velvet, eighteen yards long and lined with white satin. The velvet must be heavily embroidered with gold and trimmed with ermine and miniver, making its weight no mean matter even for eight athletic twentieth century maids.

The fact that she is not living with her husband was the court's excuse for his failure to include Consuelo, duchess of Marlborough, among the canopy bearers, for, with the exception of the Duchess of Hamilton, who succeeded to her place, the ladies are the same as those who officiated at Queen Alexandra's coronation. The Duchess of Montrose, who is a great friend of Queen Mary, is related to Lord Decies, who recently married Mrs. George Gould's daughter Vivien. Lord Alastair Graham, son of the duchess, was best man at the Gould-Decies wedding. The Marquis of Breadalbane, who is married to a daughter of the Duchess of Montrose, is expected to be the next representative of the crown in Ireland, and the Earl of Aberdeen is said to contemplate an early retirement, so it will be seen that though Lord Decies is only a humble baron, his family connections are pretty weighty ones.

The Grahams are exceedingly wealthy and keep high state in almost feudal fashion at Buchanan castle, the Duke of Montrose's favorite country seat. Like so many of the ultra exclusive ladies of the conservative aristocracy, the Duchess of Montrose was little at court during King Edward's liberal reign. Her reappearance will be made as a canopy bearer with the Duchess of Hamilton, the ancient feud between Montrose and Hamilton having been accentuated in late years by the marriage of the heiress of the Hamiltons, Lady Mary Douglas-Hamilton, daughter of the former duke, to the Marquis of Graham, heir of Montrose. It is said the late duke almost stripped the Hamilton castles of their art treasures in order to bestow them on his only child, the present Marchioness of Graham. When the present duke, a distant kinsman, succeeded to the title and estates he was so poor that he could not maintain his position until he had married Miss Nina Poore, an heiress, the present Duchess of Hamilton. At least this is the gossip Elsa sends me.

The House of the Whispering Pines

By ANNA KATHARINE GREEN

Copyright, 1910.
By Anna Katharine Rohlfis

I HAVE mentioned poison as my first thought. It was a natural one, the result undoubtedly of having noticed two small cordial glasses standing on a little table over against the fireplace. When I was conscious again of my own fears I crossed to the table and peered into these glasses. They were not club glasses, and they both were empty. However, they had not been so long. In each I found traces of anisette cordial, and, though no bottle stood near, I was very confident that it could readily be found somewhere in the room. What had preceded and followed the drinking of this cordial? Alas, there was but little more to see! A pair of curling irons lay on the hearth, but I had no sooner lifted them than I dropped them with a shudder of unspeakable loathing, only to start at the noise they made in striking the tiles, for it was the selfsame noise I had heard when listening from below. These tongs, set up against the side of the fireplace, had been jarred down by the forcible shutting of the large front door, and no man other than myself was in the house or had been in the house—only the two women. A stick or two still smoldered on the hearthstone. In the ashes lay some scattered fragments of paper which crumbled at my touch. On the floor in front I espied only a stray hairpin. Everything else was in place throughout the room except the cushions and that horror on the lounge, waiting the second look I had so far refrained from giving it.

That look I could no longer withhold. I must know the depth of the gulf over which I hung. I must not wrong with a thought one who had smiled upon me like an angel of light—a young girl, too, with the dew of innocence on her beauty to every eye but mine and only not to mine within—shall I say ten awful minutes? I would look again and perhaps discover that my own eyes had been at fault; that there were no marks on Adelaide's throat, or, if marks, not just the ones my fancy had painted there.

Turning, I let my glance fall first on the feet. I had not noted them before, and I was startled to see that the arctic in which they were clad were filled all around with snow. She had walked then as the other was walking now—she who detested every effort and was of such delicate make that exertion of unusual kind could not readily be associated with her. Had she come alone or in Carmel's company, and, if in Carmel's company, on what ostensible errand if not that of death? Her dress, which was of dark wool, showed that she had changed her garments for this trip. I had seen her at dinner, and this was not the gown she had worn then—the gown in which she had confronted me during those few intolerable minutes when I could not meet her eyes. Nothing spoke of the dinner party or of her having been dragged here unawares, but all of previous intent and premeditation. Surely hope was getting uppermost. If I had dreamed the marks—

But, no! There they were, unmistakable and damning, just where the breath struggles up. I put my own thumbs on these two dark spots to see if, when—What was it—a lightning stroke or a call of fate which one must answer while sense remains? I felt my head pulled around by some unseen force from behind and met staring into mine through the glass of the window a pair of burning eyes. Or was it fantasy? For in another moment they were gone. But the possibility of a person having seen me in this position before the dead was enough to startle me to my feet, and, though in another instant I became convinced that I had been the victim of hallucination, I nevertheless made haste to cross to the window and take a look through its dismal panes. A gale of blinding snow was sweeping past, making all things indistinguishable, but the absence of balcony outside was reassuring, and I stepped hastily back, asking myself for the first time what I should do and where I should now go to insure myself from being called as a witness to the awful occurrence which had just taken place in this house. Something I must do to save myself the anguish and Carmel's danger of my testimony in this matter. She must never know, the world must never know, that I had seen her here.

I could not be the death of two women. The loss of one weighed heavily enough upon my conscience. I would fly the place—I would leave this ghastly find to tell its own story. The night was stormy, the hour late, the spot a remote one and the road to it but little used. I could easily escape, and when the morning came—But it was the present I must think of now—this hour, this moment. How came I to stay so long? In feverish haste I began to throw the pillows back over the quiet limbs, the accusing face. Shudderingly I hid those eyes (I understood their strange protuberance now) and, recklessly bent on flight, was halfway across the floor when my feet were stayed—I wonder my reason was not unseated—by a sudden and tremendous attack on the great door below, mingled with loud cries to open which ran thundering through the house, calling up innumerable echoes from its dead and hidden corners.

It was the police. The wild night, the biting storm, had been of no avail. An alarm had reached headquarters, and all hope of escape on my part was at an end. Yet, because at such crises instinct rises superior to reason, I blew out the candle and softly made my way into the hall. I had remembered the window opening over a shed at the head of the kitchen staircase. I could reach it from this rear hall by just a turn or two, and once on that shed a short leap would land me on the ground, after which I could easily trust to the storm to conceal my flight across the open golf links. It was worth trying, at least. Anything was better than being found in the house with my murdered betrothed.

I had no reason to think that I was being sought or that my presence in this building was even suspected. It might well be that the police were even ignorant of the tragedy awaiting them across the threshold of the door they seemed intent on battering down. The gleam of a candle burning in this closed up house or even the tale told by the rising smoke may have drawn them from the road to investigation.

With a spring I reached the window by which I hoped to escape and quickly raised it. A torrent of snow swept in, covering my face and breast in a moment. It did something more—it cleared my brain, and I remembered my poor horse standing in this blinding gale under cover of the snow packed pines. Every one knew my horse. I could commit no greater folly than to flee by the rear fields while such a witness to my presence remained in full view in front. With the sensation of a trapped animal I reclosed the window and cast about for a safe corner where I could lie concealed until I learned what had brought these men here and how much I really had to fear from their presence.

I had but little time in which to choose. The door below had just given way, and a party of at least three men were already stamping their feet free from snow in the hall. I did not like the tone of their voices; it was too low and steady to suit me. I had rather have heard drunken cries or a burst of wild hilarity than these stern and purposeful whispers. Men of resolution could have but one errand here. My doom was closing round me. I could only put off the fatal moment. But it was better to do this than to plunge headlong into the unknown fate awaiting me.

I knew of a possible place of concealment. It was in the ballroom not far from where I stood. I remembered the spot well. It was at the top of a little staircase leading to the musicians' gallery. A balustrade guarded this gallery, supported by a boarding wide enough to hide a man lying behind it at his full length. It would offer me the double advantage of concealment and an unobstructed view of what went on in the hall through the main doorway opening directly opposite. I could reach this ballroom and its terminal gallery without going around to this door. A smaller one communicated directly with the corridor in which I was then lurking, and toward this I now made my way with all the precaution suggested by my desperate situation. No man ever moved more lightly. The shoes which I had taken off in the lower hall were yet in my hand. I had caught them up after replacing the cushions on Adelaide's body. Even to my own straining ears I made no perceptible sound. I reached the balcony and had stretched myself out at full length behind the boarding before the men below had left the lower floor.

More quickly than I expected the total darkness in which I lay brightened under an advancing lantern, and I heard the steps of two men coming down the hall. It was a steady if not rapid approach, and I was quite prepared for their presence when they finally reached the doorway opposite and stopped to look in at what must have appeared to them a vast and empty space. When I lifted my head again it was to catch a glimpse of their side faces as they turned to look elsewhere for what they were plainly in search of. An oath, muffled but stern, which was the first word above a whisper that I had heard issue from their lips, told me that they had reached the room and had come upon the horror which lay there.

Maddened by my own intolerable position, drawn by a power I felt it impossible to resist, I crept to my feet and took my staggering way down the half dozen steps of the gallery and thence along by the left hand wall toward the farther doorway and through it to where these men stood weighing the chances in which my life and honor were involved and those of one other of whom I dared not think.

It was dark in the ballroom, and it was only a little less so in the corridor. All the light was in that room. But I still slid along the wall like a thief, with eyes set and ears agape for any chance word which might reach me. Suddenly I heard one.

It was this, uttered with a decision which had the strange effect of lifting my head and making a man of me again:

"That settles it. He will find it hard to escape after this."

But I had been dreading to hear a she. Yet why? Who save myself could know that Carmel had been within these woe-filled walls to-night? Relieved by the discovery,

I drew myself up and stepped quickly forward into the room where the two officials stood. My hands were clean of this murder, and, allowing the surety of this fact to take a foremost place in my mind, I faced these men, and with real feeling, but as little display of it as possible I observed:

"You have come to my aid in a critical moment. This is my betrothed wife—the woman I was to marry—and I find her lying here dead in this closed and lonely house. What does it mean? I know no more than you do."

The two men eyed me quietly; then Policeman Hexford, whom I knew, pointed to my shoeless feet and sternly retorted:

"Permit me to doubt your last assertion. You seem to be in better position than ourselves to explain the circumstances which puzzle you."

They were right. It was for me to talk, not for them. But here emotion seized me, and I almost broke down. I was in a position much more dreadful than any they could imagine or should be allowed to.

Their silence led me to examine their faces. Hexford's mouth had settled into a stiff, straight line, and the other man's wore a cynical smile I did not like. At this presage of the difficulties awaiting me I felt one strand of the rope sustaining me above this yawning gulf of shame and ignominy crack and give way. But the courage which had served me in lesser extremities did not fail me now, and, kneeling down before my dead betrothed, I kissed her cold white hand with sincere compunction before attempting the garbled and probably totally incoherent story with which I endeavored to explain the inexplicable situation.

They listened—I will do them that much justice—but it was with such an air of incredulity that my words fell with less and less continuity and finally lost themselves in a confused stammer as I reached the point where I pulled the cushions from the couch and made my ghastly discovery.

"You see—see for yourselves—what confronted me. My betrothed—a dainty, delicate woman—dead, alone, in this solitary, faraway spot, the victim of what? I asked myself then—I ask myself now. I cannot understand it—or those glasses yonder—or those marks!" They were black by this time—unmistakable—not to be ignored by them or by me.

"We understand those marks, and you ought to," came from the second man, the one I did not know.

My head fell forward. My lips refused to speak the words. The vision of the one woman bending over the other was a maddening one. I shook myself free from it by starting to my feet. "It's—it's"—I gasped.

"She has been strangled," quoth Hexford doggedly.

"A dog's death," mumbled the other.

"You had better sit down," Hexford suddenly suggested, pushing a chair my way. "Clarke, look up the telephone and ask for three more men. I am going into this matter thoroughly. Perhaps you will tell us where the telephone is?" he asked, turning my way.

The second man left the room to go to the telephone. As he did so Hexford lit the candle. Idly watching, for nothing now could make me look at the lounge again, I noticed the candlestick. It was of brass and rare in style and workmanship—a candlestick to be remembered, one of a pair, perhaps. I felt my hair stir as I took in the details of its shape and ornamentation. If its mate were in her house—No, no, no! I would not have it so I could not control my emotion if I let my imagination stray too far. The candlestick must be the property of the club. I had only forgotten. It was bought when? While thinking, planning, I was conscious of Hexford's eyes fixed steadily upon me.

"Did you go into the kitchen in your wanderings below?" he asked.

"No," I began, but seeing that I had made a mistake, I bungled and added weakly, "Yes; after matches."

"And did you get them?"

"Yes."

"In the dark? You must have had trouble in finding them?"

"Not at all. Only safety matches are allowed here, and they are put in a receptacle at the side of each door. I had but to open the kitchen door, feel along the jamb, find the receptacle and pull the box out. I'm well used to all parts of the house."

"Where did you light your first match?"

"Upstairs."

"Not in the kitchen?"

"No, sir."

"That's a pity. I thought you might be able to tell me how so many wine and whisky bottles came to be standing on the kitchen table."

I stared at him, dazed. Then I remembered the two small glasses on the little table across the room and instinctively glanced at them. But no whisky had been drunk out of them. The odor of anisette is unmistakable.

"You carry the key to the wine cellar?" he asked.

I considered a moment. I did not know what to make of bottles on the kitchen table. These women and bottles! They abhorred wine; they had reason to. I remembered the dinner and all that had signaled it and felt my confusion grow.

"The keys were given up by the janitor yesterday," I managed to stammer at last. "But I did not bring them here tonight. They are in my rooms at home."

I finished with a gasp. I had suddenly remembered that these keys were not in my rooms. I had had them with me at Miss Cumberland's, and, being given to fooling with something when embarrassed, I had fooled with them and dropped them while talking with Adelaide and watching Carmel. I had meant to pick them up, but I forgot and—

"You need say nothing more about it," remarked Hexford. "I have no right to question you at all. Let us see what there is in here," stepping into the adjoining small room, into which I had simply peered in my own investigation of the place.

As he did so a keen blast blew in; a window in the adjoining room was open. He cast me a hurried glance and, with the door in his hand, made the following remark:

"Your ladylove, the victim here, could not have come through the snow with no more clothing on her than we see now. She must have worn a hat and coat or furs or something of that nature. Let us look for them."

As I followed him into the closet he pushed the door wide, pulling out an electric torch as he did so. By its light we saw almost at first glance the coat and hat he professed to seek, lying in a corner of the floor, beside an overturned chair.

"Good!" left my companion's lips. "That's all straight. You recognize these garments?" I nodded, speechless.

BEGIN AT HOME.

One Sympathetic Woman's Method of Doing Welfare Work.

Recently a prominent New York clubwoman discovered that her husband's stenographer, a very capable woman, was supporting an invalid mother and sister on a salary of $15 a week. Her husband happened to chuckle over the fact that he got more work out of the $15 a week woman than out of the man to whom he had formerly given $25. Instead of applauding his business sharpness, the wife expostulated. Netted, the husband retorted that he couldn't in the present state of business afford to pay the stenographer more unless his wife could give up a projected trip abroad.

"I'll give it up in a minute. I should feel just as if I had taken the money out of that girl's pocket since you have put it in that way," was her reply.

The result was that the stenographer's salary was increased, and, although it was not really necessary to give up the trip, the clubwoman insisted on living up to her part of the bargain.

The average man means well, but sometimes the demands for money made on him by his own women folk are so great and insistent that he is apt to lose sight of the interest of his women employees, who are usually more easily imposed upon than men.

THE UNENGAGED GIRL.

How She May Make the Most of Opportunity.

This is the time of year when all things conspire to help the girl who wants to marry.

Male beings in the wild state are prone to wander in the summer season, and a girl must be very attractive and very clever to keep the undivided attention of any admirer then.

In the winter, however, it is different. The warm parlor, the dainty lunch, the occasional square meal with the family, the home atmosphere, are all most acceptable and comfortable to the youth and suggest visions of his own home of the future, with the pretty girl prettier than ever in an attractive house frock reigning therein as queen.

All of which spells opportunity for the girl.

But if she is wise it will offer opportunities to avoid the person who will be sure to make home unhappy. The youth who comes principally to get in out of the cold is not the person to marry.

The really good sort, the fellow that makes the good husband, will offer something of diversion, bring some candy and incidentally help keep father's light and fuel bills down by taking the girl to the theater, to the party and out for a little drive occasionally. He will share the role of entertainer with her.

Some grasping triflers have been known to have a half dozen girls in whose homes they spend comfortable winter evenings, with no thought but for their own comfort and the coming of spring, when they can once more shine in the open.

Coins that virtually have disappeared from circulation are gold three and one dollar pieces, the trade dollar of silver, the nickel three cent piece, the copper two cent piece, the copper half cent and silver three and five cent pieces.

A law and order league is to be organized at Crothersville, the purpose of it being to secure the strict and impartial enforcement of all the laws, the creating of a higher standard of morals and the teaching of the boys and girls so that they will develop into nobler men and women. A temporary organization was formed at a public meeting held this week. Dr. May presented a set of by-laws and a declaration of principles and a committee, consisting of Dr. May, Howard Rider and Leonard Gillaspay, were appointed to go over them and make any changes considered necessary. S. F. Benham is president of the temporary organization and Frederick Ostermeyer, secretary.

REDMOND AND BALFOUR

Shake Hands For First
Time in Twenty Years.

London, May 6.—The presentation by the members of parliament to Speaker Lowther and his wife of gifts in honor of their silver wedding anniversary led to an interesting scene in the lobby.

After the ceremony Mr. Balfour cordially shook hands with John E. Redmond. The last occasion on which Mr. Balfour thus greeted Mr. Redmond was twenty years ago, when Mr. Redmond was liberated from the famous Kilmainham jail.

TAKEN AT HIS WORD

Tacoma Preacher Concludes Mercy Is Missing.

Tacoma, Wash., May 6.—Rev. A. A. Metcalf, pastor of the Midland church here, declaring he made a fake confession of wrongdoing to Rev. Thomas T. Elliott, district superintendent, and Dr. J. C. Zeller, president of the Puget Sound university, for the sole purpose of ascertaining whether there was any Christianity in the Methodist church, so impressed the members of his congregation with his sincerity that they are standing by him almost unanimously. Metcalf and a young woman, who has since been befriended by Metcalf's wife, had doubts, they say, as to whether there was much true Christianity in the church. According to their statements, they faked a confession, giving it in confidence to Elliott, Zeller and three others. Someone broke the confidence. Elliott asked for Metcalf's resignation. The young woman is on the verge of a nervous collapse. Mrs. Metcalf has taken her into her home. Metcalf presented his resignation to the congregation after bitterly denouncing his denomination and Dr. Zeller. He said:

"When I made that confession, I lied deliberately. I know it is not right to lie, and I plead guilty to that charge. We framed up the story to see if we would be treated with the mercy a Christian should bestow on a repentant sinner. We found that there is no Christian mercy either in the Methodist church or Puget Sound university."

JACK JOHNSON GRINS

The Man Who Had Been Planning for Championship Knocked Out.

Kansas City, May 6.—Jim Flynn of Pueblo knocked out Al Kaufman of San Francisco in the tenth round here last night. The bout had thirty seconds to go when Flynn sent over a right and left to the jaw which sent Kaufman reeling to the ropes, falling on his back and rolling over with outstretched arms. He got up just after the fatal ten seconds had been counted and staggered to the ropes. His seconds carried him to his corner.

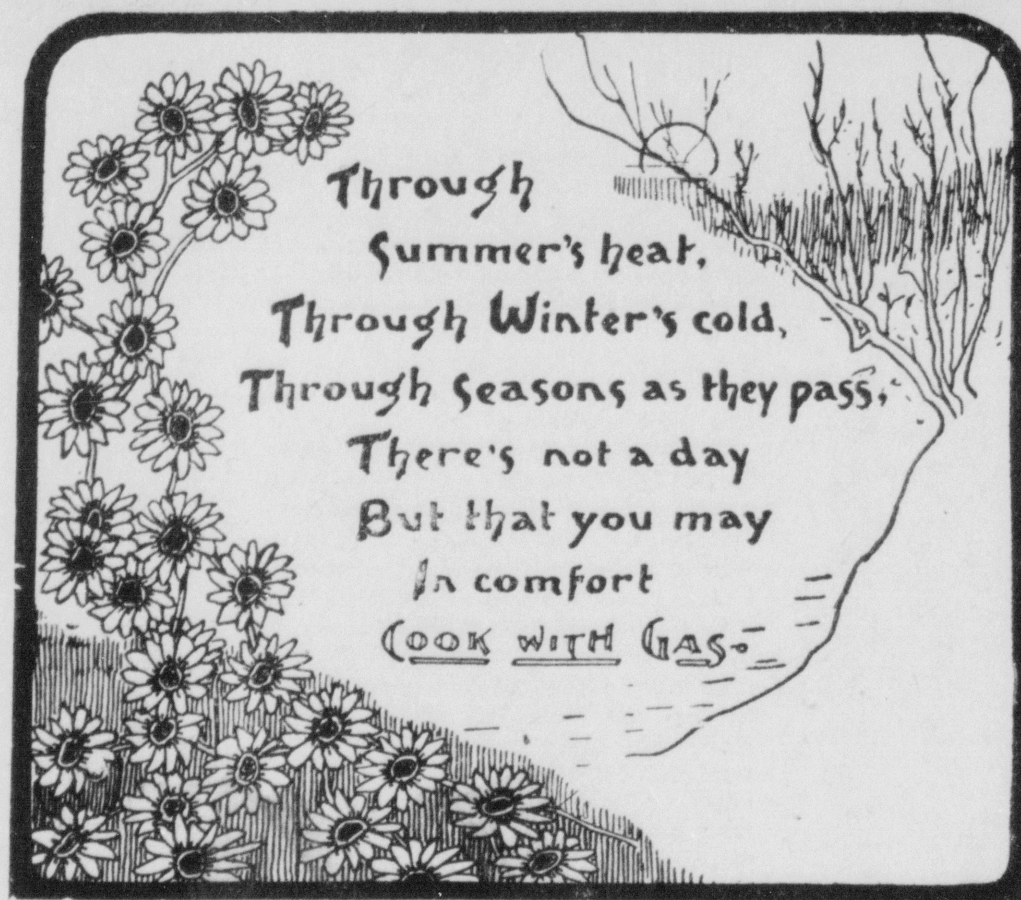

Kaufman was sent to the floor seven times during the battle.

Poison Was in Baby's Reach.

Bloomington, Ind., May 6.—Margaret Frances, aged two, mistook a box of strychnine tablets for candy and ate all of them. Three physicians did all within their power, but she was dead within an hour. The medicine was for the mother.
